

PUZZLE P10 : THE TALE OF RAGA-MAN

Raga-Man was a car pop singer who loved to sip grape corn, which was made by reaping crops. To be successful, he changed his name to Gas Pro Prince, but his hit song, "I'm No Pig Scraper" had the unfortunate effect of offending the then president, Casper Pringo - II. He was jailed for blasphemy, and he spent his time scraping rope but continued singing. His second greatest hit, "Can Ropes Grip?" became the headline in the local paper, scoring the top spot on the charts.
